

I feel that conflict of interests and yet less diversity will be the result of media companies owning and controlling the network infrastucture. Like strip malls and fast food restaurants that have made each street corner in America look the same, the media will also have the same homogenation effect where unique outlets get swallowed up without most consumers really know what is occurring.